WE SHAPE THE FUTURE WITH YOU

Energy transition, EU regulations or grid stability: Europe's power plant law is undergoing fundamental change. We support you in mastering the challenges. And accompany you in the legally compliant implementation of tomorrow's energy market.

Thus, ensuring that the planning, construction and operation phases of power plants and grid structures run smoothly from a legal point of view is becoming increasingly important. In the process, aspects of financing and credit risk are coming more into the focus of market participants than before. In our experience, a sound approach with early and close coordination processes is the key to successful, legally secure and economic projects.

SAXINGER has been advising companies in the power plant law on all energy law matters for many years. Our clients include domestic and international market participants, including energy suppliers, energy traders, network operators, investment funds, banks and clients from the industry.

The team is led by experienced lawyers, including experts in public law, procurement and environmental law, corporate law, mergers & acquisitions, competition law and antitrust law.

We do not just focus on individual aspects of energy law, but develop multidisciplinary and comprehensive solutions.

Three good reasons – what sets us apart:

Our lawyers combine the full range of skills required to successfully implement your strategic and operational objectives.

And make every effort to really get to know you. Our goal is to build a long-term partnership and work closely with you – side by side with your management teams.

At our locations, lawyers are at work who know the legal and economic particularities on site and are at home in the respective cultures. As a team, we develop solutions for you that take you further. No matter whether on the national or international stage.
